(TLP-C) NO KINGS RALLIES INTELLIGENCE REPORT (US) 14 JUN 26

KNOW THE TARGET – WATCH THE TARGET – LOOK DEEPER – EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED

'Go, station the lookout, let him report what he sees. When he sees riders, horsemen in pairs, a train of donkeys, a train of camels, let him pay close attention, very close attention.' Then the lookout called, 'O Lord, I stand continually by day on the watchtower, and I am stationed every night at my guard post.'

(Isaiah 21:6–8)

IN OBSCURA COMMENT

Open Source Intelligence Collection, with the force multiplier of two careers in national security provides a visage of the mantra above, knowing the threat. This includes myriad reporting concerning the repeated deadly and devastating delivery of that threat, operationally, strategically and tactically inside the United States and across Europe with Christianity targeted, successfully. This is why In Obscura was created. Open Source Intelligence Collection has yielded corroborated and yet all too familiar threat analysis and targeting by enemy forces as far back as the antiwar 1960-70s, the same target is the overthrow or neutering of United States. I have made no secret in my analysis that this operation did not terminate with our forced surrender of Southeast Asia.

NO KINGS RALLIES INTELLIGENCE REPORT (US)

Patrick Colbeck, June 6, 2026, Election Crime Bureau

<https://electioncrimebureau.com/nokings/>

Disputed Fact

The “No Kings” movement is a coordinated series of large-scale political protests primarily targeting the second Trump administration. Three major mobilizations have occurred: June 14, 2025 (~5million participants), October 18, 2025 (~7million participants), and March 28, 2026 (~8–9million participants).

While organizers present the movement as decentralized and grassroots, investigative reporting has identified a sophisticated infrastructure of approximately 500 activist organizations with an estimated $3 billion in combined annual revenues providing the logistical backbone. The primary coordinating entity is Indivisible, a national progressive nonprofit funded in significant part by George Soros’ Open Society Foundations. The movement also includes participation by a network of radical socialist and communist organizations funded by techmogul Neville Roy Singham, who lives in China and has been described as an avowed communist.

Origins

The No Kings movement grew from the “50501” framework (50 states, 50 protests, 1 movement) that emerged in early 2025. Its key protest events are as follows:

Event	Date	Est. Attendance	Events	Flagship Location
No Kings Day 1	June 14, 2025	~5 million	2,100+	Philadelphia, PA
No Kings Day 2	October 18, 2025	~7 million	2,700+	Washington, D.C.
No Kings Day 3	March 28, 2026	~8–9 million	3,300+	St. Paul/Minneapolis, MN

The first event was deliberately timed to coincide with the U.S. Army’s 250th Anniversary Parade and President Trump’s 79th birthday. The March 2026 mobilization was triggered in part by the killings of Alex Pretti and Renée Good, the 2026 Minnesota general strike, and the outbreak of the 2026 Iran War. According to organizers, the movement has drawn over 20 million cumulative participants across all three events, though independent analysts have offered somewhat lower estimates.

A fourth event — a concert called Rise Up, Sing Out — is planned for June 14, 2026, organized in partnership with the Committee for the First Amendment, featuring celebrities including Jane Fonda, Bette Midler, Joy Reid, and Patti Smith.

PHILOSOPHICAL FRAMEWORK: THE "3.5% RULE"

The theory that if 3.5% of the population engages in sustained nonviolent action, systemic change becomes inevitable.

The No Kings movement does not publish a single unified policy platform, but its stated positions are consistently drawn from a set of anti-Trump policy grievances articulated across protest materials, the official website, and coalition press releases. Core stated positions include:

Anti-Authoritarianism / Constitutional Concerns

- Opposition to what organizers describe as “unprecedented use of executive orders” that bypass Congress and sidestep oversight
- Resistance to attempts to weaken or defy court orders, including ignoring lawful subpoenas and judicial rulings
- Opposition to the “politicization of the Justice Department” and threatening criminal charges against critics and political opponents

- Resistance to the replacement of career civil servants with political loyalists across independent agencies

Immigration and ICE

- Abolition of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)
- Opposition to expanded deportations and detentions, including what organizers call “retaliation against protesters and immigrants”
- Demands for ICE/Border Patrol accountability (California’s “No Kings Act,” SB 747, closely mirrored the protest’s goals by closing legal loopholes for federal officer accountability)
- The “Eyes on ICE” training program, launched in January 2026, trained over 200,000 viewers in monitoring federal enforcement actions

Anti-War / Iran

- Opposition to the 2026 Iran War, with slogans such as “No Illegal Wars” and “fund people, not bombs”
- Calls for a shift in federal spending away from defense and toward domestic programs

Social / Civil Rights

- Protection of LGBTQ rights
- Reinstatement of rescinded federal DEI initiatives
- Protection of ethnic minorities and voting rights
- Opposition to “gerrymandering and other concerns” related to election integrity

Democracy and Accountability

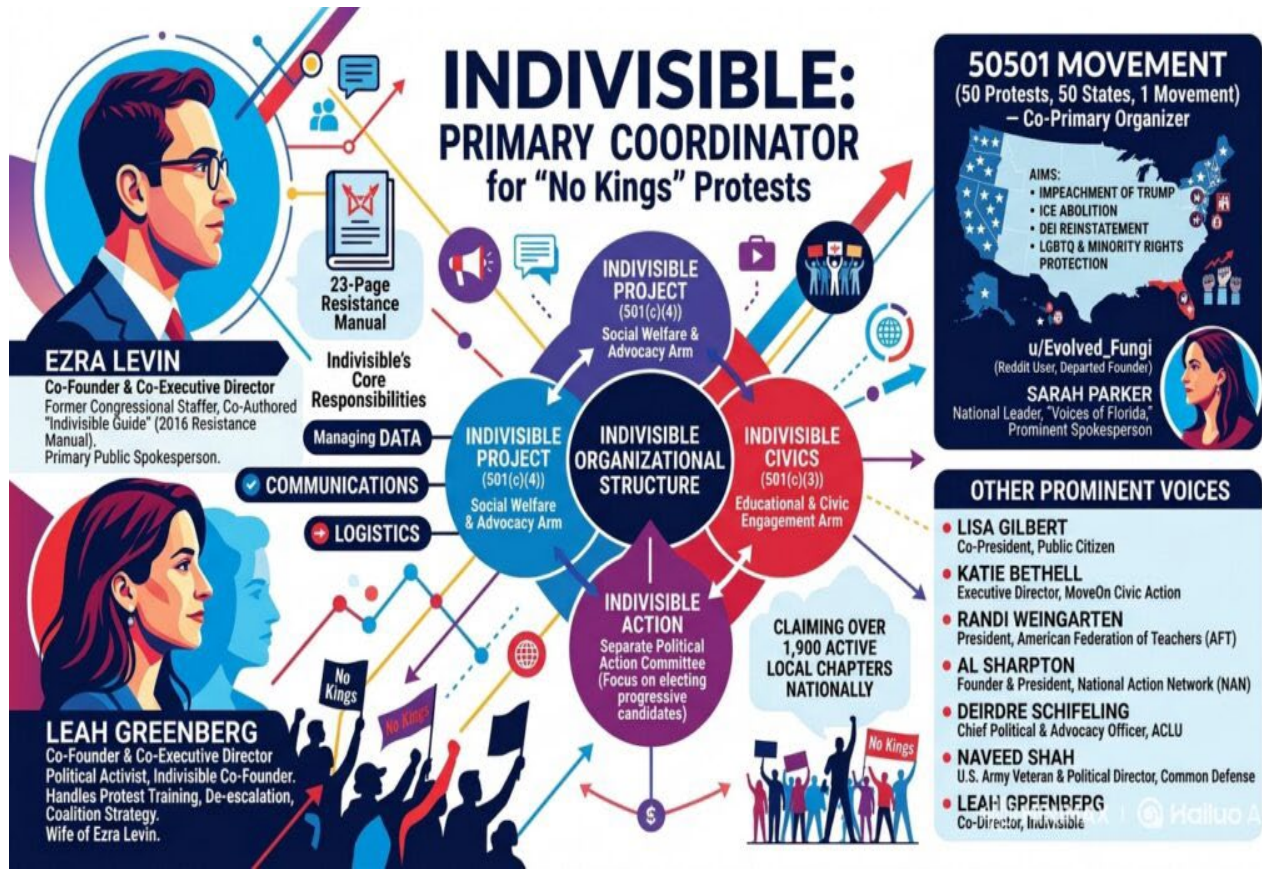

- Impeachment of Donald Trump and removal from office
- Resistance to what organizers call “democratic backsliding”
- Transparency regarding the Jeffrey Epstein files (a notable theme in the March 2026 protests)
- Calls for economic fairness, opposing what protesters describe as “tax cuts for billionaires” while healthcare is cut

The movement operates around the philosophical framework of the “3.5% rule” of nonviolent social change — the theory that if 3.5% of the population engages in sustained nonviolent action, systemic change becomes inevitable.

George Soros / Open Society Foundations

The most documented funding link involves George Soros' philanthropic network. The Open Society Action Fund issued a $3 million, two-year grant to the Indivisible organization in 2023 "to support the grantee's social welfare activities". Across all grants from 2017 to 2023, Open Society Foundations has awarded a total of $7.61 million to Indivisible. The Open Society Foundations clarified that the grants were not specifically designated for the No Kings protests, and that the foundation does not "pay, train, or coordinate protesters". Soros' son, Alex Soros, now serves as chairman of the board of Open Society Foundations.

Additionally, in 2017, Indivisible received a $350,000 grant from Tides Advocacy, an organization affiliated with the Tides Network.

Neville Roy Singham Network

A second, more radical funding network has been identified, centered on Neville Roy Singham, an American tech entrepreneur described as an avowed communist who resides in China. The New York Times reported in 2023 that Singham works closely with the Chinese government and state media, channeling donations through nonprofits and shell companies. Singham-funded organizations participating in No Kings protests include:

- People’s Forum (New York)
- ANSWER Coalition
- CodePink (his wife, Jodie Evans, is co-founder)
- Party for Socialism and Liberation

Federal Grant Connections

DataRepublican, an independent data watchdog, published an interactive map identifying federal grant flows to nonprofits involved in the June 14, 2025 No Kings rally. Among the organizations with documented federal grant links: 350.org (EIN 26-1150699), with revenues listed at approximately $19.9 million, is among those listed.

Government Accountability Institute Findings

Researchers at the Government Accountability Institute (GAI) — the conservative watchdog founded by Peter Schweizer and Steve Bannon, funded by the Mercer family — found that $294,487,641 in funding grants from six major donors have supported organizations participating in No Kings marches and protests.

Broader Network Assessment

A Fox News Digital investigation estimated that the approximately 500 activist groups involved in the No Kings ecosystem collectively report approximately $3 billion in combined annual revenues. This network provides infrastructure, mobilization capacity, and organizational reach, though individual local chapters are largely volunteer-driven and self-funded.

Conclusion: A Movement AGAINST Our Founding Not For It

Two Moral Universes: The American Republic vs. The “No Kings” Movement

The infographic is split into two halves. The left half, titled 'The Founders' Republic: A Theocentric Foundation', features a tree with a scroll labeled 'Constitution' and icons of a church and a classical building. The right half, titled 'The “No Kings” Movement: A Secular Framework', features a head silhouette filled with icons of a globe, scales, and a book labeled 'Social Contract'. A central table compares the two worldviews across four dimensions: Source of Rights, Human Nature, Moral Authority, and Foundational Worldviews. Below the table are quotes from Washington and Adams, and a section titled 'The Inverted Slogan' showing a broken column.

The Founders' Republic: A Theocentric Foundation

4 Appeals to the Divine
The Declaration of Independence invokes God as Creator, Supreme Judge, Divine Providence, and Source of Law.

Natural Law as the “Spine”
Rights derive from God, not the state; even rulers are subject to universal moral truths.

Foundational Worldviews Comparison

Dimension	Founding Patriots	No Kings Movement
Source of Rights	The Creator God	The State / Political Consensus
Human Nature	Sinful; Requires Checks	Perfectible via Social Structure
Moral Authority	Transcendent Natural Law	Secular Progressive Consensus

QUOTE: “Indispensable Supports”
Washington and Adams argued the Constitution is only adequate for a moral and religious people.

The “No Kings” Movement: A Secular Framework

State-Granted Rights
Rights are viewed as politically constructed social contracts rather than inherent, God-endowed unalienables.

Marxist-Materialist Roots
Core organizations are often rooted in atheistic philosophies that reject transcendent moral accountability.

No King but Jesus
The movement flips “No King but Jesus” (God is sovereign) to mean no higher authority exists.

It is no coincidence that the No Kings movement has chosen this particular moment — the eve of America’s 250th birthday — to escalate its intensity and reach. July 4, 2026, marks the Semiquincentennial of the Declaration of Independence, the singular document in which the Founders proclaimed that all men are created equal, endowed by their Creator with unalienable rights, and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. The timing of the No Kings movement’s crescendo is not accidental. It is strategic.

At its core, the No Kings movement is not a defense of the founding — it is a repudiation of it. Where the Founders built a republic on God-endowed natural rights, limited government, constitutional order, and the inseparability of religion and public virtue, the movement’s organizational backbone advocates for expanded state power, secular-progressive social reconstruction, the dismantling of constitutional protections, and a moral framework in which no transcendent authority governs human conduct. The movement invokes “No Kings” as its banner — but the original phrase, “No King but Jesus,” was a declaration of divine sovereignty, asserting that even the king must answer to God. The movement has stripped the slogan of its theological soul and turned it inside out.

In this respect, the No Kings movement is best understood as an accelerant of the broader cultural project that the 1619 Project put into motion — the systematic reframing of America’s founding not as a covenant of liberty but as a structure of oppression requiring deconstruction.

The 1619 Project explicitly sought to replace 1776 with 1619 as the nation’s “true founding,” to teach young Americans to despise their Constitution, their economic system, and their Founders, and to channel that manufactured contempt into a political program of reparations, identity-based redistributionism, and structural dismantling of founding institutions. The Heritage Foundation summarized the 1619 Project’s overriding lesson plainly: “Young people must learn to despise their nation — its Constitution, ideals, economic system, and its Founders.”

The No Kings movement carries that project from the classroom to the streets — and into the moment when the nation is most naturally inclined to reflect on what it was built to be. As America prepares to commemorate 250 years of the Declaration that changed the course of human history, a well-funded network of socialist organizations, secular-progressive coalitions, and China-linked activists has mobilized millions under a slogan stolen from the patriots they oppose. The Manhattan Institute warned as early as 2025 that the 250th anniversary would summon a “resurgence” of the 1619 Project’s false history, with some choosing to “chronicle the nation’s imperfections rather than its achievements” — precisely as the No Kings movement is doing.

The American Founders were not naive about what their republic required to survive. Benjamin Franklin warned, “Only a virtuous people are capable of freedom.” John Adams declared the Constitution “wholly inadequate to the government of any other” than a moral and religious people. George Washington warned that national morality cannot exist “in exclusion of religious principle”. They built a nation on the premise that liberty is not self-sustaining — that it depends on a people who acknowledge a moral authority higher than the state, higher than the crowd, and higher than the revolutionary vanguard.

The No Kings movement does not share that premise. It is not an imperfect heir to the American Revolution. It is, in its deepest commitments, its antithesis — and it has chosen the year of America’s greatest birthday to press its case. Whether the republic the Founders built is strong enough to withstand the challenge is, as Franklin himself would have recognized, the permanent question of self-governance: a republic, if you can keep it.
