Rivian Sees Several Amazon Vans Destroyed in Suspected Portland Arson

Posted by Cláudio Afonso, 23 June 2026 <https://electric-vehicles.com/rivian/rivian-sees-several-amazon-vans-destroyed-in-suspected-portland-arson/>

Four Amazon electric delivery vans, co-developed and built by Rivian, were destroyed in a fire that investigators believe was deliberately set in Southwest Portland, Oregon. The blaze broke out shortly before 2:30 a.m. on Monday at a lot beside the Rivian service center on Southwest 1st Avenue.

A single engine was sent at first, but crews arrived to find multiple vans fully engulfed and an early belief that as many as five were involved — according to Portland Fire & Rescue. Firefighters held the fire to the four vans and reported no injuries.

An arson case with no suspect named, Investigators from the Portland Fire & Rescue and Portland Police Bureau arson unit determined the fire was intentionally set.

Iranians tied to Revolutionary Guard crossing US-Canada border illegally trigger new concerns, By Anna Giaritelli, Washington Examiner, Published June 24, 2026 5:00am ET | Updated June 24, 2026 8:02am ET

National security leaders are growing increasingly concerned about Iranians with ties to the Revolutionary Guard attempting to enter the United States illegally from Canada and harm Americans as the war overseas continues.

Homeland Security Secretary Markwayne Mullin disclosed this week that federal immigration authorities from U.S. Customs and Border Protection and Canadian police had begun to encounter Iranian nationals attempting to enter the U.S. illegally along its northern border, with the number of encounters increasing day by day. Mullin did not provide additional details.

“Most teams travel with around 120 people. That’s their support staff, doctors, coaches, everybody else that comes along with them and their delegation,” Mullin said. “We accepted 53 individuals coming in. The rest of the individuals that Iran had

Former acting director of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Johnathan Fahey, said the alleged plot to smuggle in a Guard member with the country's soccer team was not surprising. "This would be certainly one of the easiest, cleverest ways to get people in the country, is say they're part of the soccer team," Fahey told Bartiromo on Fox Business on Monday.

Network Contagion BLUF/ Abstract

Key Judgment

- Jacob Duncan Wenske, 26, arrested May 27, 2026 on two felony terroristic threat counts for alleged threats to bomb a TPUSA summit and kill CEO Erika Kirk—widow of Charlie Kirk, assassinated September 10, 2025.
- The #exvangelical / #deconstruction ecosystem frames mainstream civic Christian participation as culturally hegemonic—an oppressive dominant order requiring resistance, not a minority seeking civic engagement. Under this frame, violence against Christian civic actors reads as self-defense. This is the permission structure.

- Target selection confirms the thesis: Wenske did not threaten figures on the hard edges of the Christian right. He threatened the centrist civic axis—populist evangelicalism, campus organizing, institutionally moderate conservative Christianity. The permission structure targets Christian civic participation itself, not theological extremism. Wenske’s own language conflates ‘evangelical’ and ‘Christian nationalist’ as synonyms for civic Christianity broadly—a denominational imprecision that itself defines the threat class.
- NCRI April 2025 assassination culture brief—cited by Charlie Kirk 153 days before his death—identified these permission structures. The Wenske arrest is the documented continuation.
- Assassination culture does not target Christian belief. It targets Christian confidence—the civic disposition that work earns status, that victimhood is not an identity, and that building institutions is a legitimate act. TPUSA is not an incidental focus of this threat environment. It is the archetype of everything the permission structure is designed to delegitimize

Anthropic’s Mythos AI broke into almost all NSA classified systems in hours

Pierluigi Paganini, Security Affairs, June 22, 2026

<https://securityaffairs.com/194016/ai/anthropics-mythos-ai-broke-into-almost-all-nsa-classified-systems-in-hours.html>

Senate testimony claims Anthropic’s Mythos AI breached NSA and Cyber Command systems in hours, prompting a U.S.-ordered shutdown.

On June 12, the Trump administration directed Anthropic to restrict access to Fable 5 and Mythos 5, its two most capable models, exclusively to US citizens. Because verifying every user’s nationality in real time isn’t practically possible, Anthropic’s only option was to shut both models down for everyone. Allies included. No warning.

The U.S. government ordered Anthropic to limit access to its Fable 5 and Mythos 5 AI models to U.S. citizens after a jailbreak was discovered. That includes Five Eyes partners, Australia, the UK, Canada, and New Zealand, and it blocked the UK AI Security Institute, the main international body for testing frontier AI models, from accessing systems it was actively evaluating.

Then came the Senate testimony. According to a report by The Economist citing a Senate Intelligence Committee hearing, Anthropic's Mythos model had penetrated nearly all classified systems managed by the NSA and US Cyber Command. Senator Mark Warner stated on June 11 that General Joshua Rudd, who leads both agencies, told him directly that Mythos had done it, and not in weeks.

"Encryption was a potent technology but narrow in its application. AI is far more powerful and versatile. On June 11th Mark Warner, the vice-chair of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said that General Joshua Rudd, who leads the National Security Agency and the Pentagon's Cyber Command, had told him that Mythos "broke into almost all of our classified systems, not in weeks, but in hours"."reported The Economist.

"Advanced AI differs from encryption in another respect, too. Whereas cryptography eventually became widely available abroad, America today enjoys a clear lead in AI. China, hobbled by American chip controls, is probably about a year behind. That advantage could become unassailable if Anthropic or other American labs crack recursive self-improvement (RSI), whereby models write better versions of themselves and thereby accelerate progress. Many insiders think that is entirely possible."

These are unverified claims reported through Senate testimony, not independently confirmed facts, and the story is still developing.

Whether or not the NSA account holds up, Mythos is real and its capabilities aren't in dispute. Anthropic refused to release it publicly, instead giving access to roughly 200 selected partners under an initiative called Project Glasswing. Amazon, Apple, Google, Microsoft, Nvidia, JPMorgan, and the Linux Foundation are among the participants.

Anthropic says Mythos Preview has already uncovered thousands of vulnerabilities, including a 27-year-old flaw in OpenBSD, one of the most security-hardened operating systems ever developed. That's more than a marketing claim—it is a strong indication of the model's real-world capability to identify complex and previously undiscovered security weaknesses."

For people who'd been using Fable 5 before the ban, the loss was tangible. Unlike previous models that required constant hand-holding, Fable 5 ran complex coding tasks for up to 20 minutes autonomously, caught its own logic errors, wrote its own tests, and delivered working software on the first run. It sat above the Opus line in Anthropic's lineup and used the same underlying architecture as Mythos, with additional safeguards added for general use. It came with a mandatory 30-day data retention policy and premium pricing, and there was a planned shift to usage-based credits set for June 23. Fable didn't survive long enough to see it.

The broader context makes the shutdown harder to read as a clean security decision. For months, the Trump administration had been dismantling AI regulations from the previous administration, approved advanced chip sales to China, and on June 2 issued an executive order asking AI labs to voluntarily share new models with the government before public release.

Then, ten days later, access was cut without notice, and the government body responsible for evaluating dangerous AI capabilities was ordered to stop publishing its reports. That's a sharp reversal in a very short window. Europe is already paying attention, with concern growing that the same scenario could play out with Azure, AWS, Google, and every other US-based cloud provider.

The debate sparked by this decision has divided the cybersecurity community. On one hand, restricting access to offensive AI capabilities reduces the risk that cybercriminals, ransomware groups, or state actors could automate highly dangerous activities. On the other hand, the same constraints can hinder defenders, red teams, and security researchers who rely on such tools for testing and analysis.

Advanced AI models and geopolitics add another layer of complexity. Safety guardrails are not perfect: researchers have repeatedly shown that even robust systems can be bypassed through advanced prompt engineering. Security is therefore not static but an ongoing cycle between control mechanisms and attempts to circumvent them.

Beyond the technical dimension, the geopolitical aspect is even more significant. Project Glasswing illustrates how access to advanced AI-driven cybersecurity capabilities is becoming a strategic asset. Early participants were mainly US-based companies such as Microsoft, Google, Apple, Cisco, CrowdStrike, and NVIDIA, with European and other international actors included only later.

For Europe, this raises a critical issue. While it has developed strong regulatory frameworks through the AI Act, NIS2, and the Cyber Resilience Act, the most advanced AI systems are still built elsewhere. The continent regulates AI but does not yet control comparable frontier models within its own ecosystem.

Even participation by ENISA and other European bodies does not fully resolve dependency on external providers. The concern is no longer only data sovereignty, but also analytical sovereignty: advanced AI systems generate highly sensitive intelligence about critical infrastructure vulnerabilities.

For countries like Italy, this creates practical questions about where such data is stored, who can access it, and how it might be used. Since providers like Anthropic also collaborate with US government entities on national security issues, governance of this information becomes even more sensitive.

Ultimately, AI is reshaping cybersecurity from a human-driven discipline into a model-driven one. Competitive advantage will depend less on discovering vulnerabilities and more on managing them at scale. Those who master these systems early will gain a lasting strategic edge, while others risk increasing dependency on external technologies that are rapidly becoming central to global digital security.

EARLY BIRD BRIEF 26 JUN 2026: POLL SHOWS GROWING U.S. DIVIDE OVER SUPPORT FOR ISRAEL:

A new Quinnipiac University poll found that 48% of U.S. voters think the United States is too supportive of Israel, while 38% say U.S. support is “just right” and 7% say the United States is not supportive enough. The poll found that 66% of self-identified Democrats, 55% of self-identified independents, and 20% of self-identified Republicans think the United States is too supportive of Israel. Quinnipiac said this is the highest share of U.S. voters saying the United States is too supportive of Israel since it began polling the issue in 2017.

Analyst:

The numbers show Israel becoming a sharper wedge inside the Democratic coalition while Republicans remain more aligned with traditional U.S.-Israel policy. Ordinary Americans could see the issue shape campus unrest, primary elections, foreign-aid votes, and local community tensions. The primary risk is that U.S. support for Israel becomes less stable as progressive candidates use the issue against establishment Democrats. Watch Democratic primaries, foreign-aid votes, and whether protest activity expands around Israel-related policy decisions.

Pastor Tony Spell Speaks Out After Neighbor Confrontation and Alleged Threats

By James Lasher Jun 25, 2026 <https://mycharisma.com/news/pastor-tony-spell-speaks-out-after-neighbor-confrontation-and-alleged-threats/>

On the morning of June 23, 2026, Pastor Mark Anthony “Tony” Spell was working on a church bus battery in the parking lot of Life Tabernacle Church in Central, Louisiana, when years of neighborhood tension boiled over.

According to Spell, the 20-year-old son of neighbor Scott Sherwin began walking along the shoulder of busy Hooper Road, shouting vulgarities across the four lanes. Then came the alleged threats that would push any husband and father to his limit.

Spell quoted them directly at his press conference the following day:

“He said, ‘Tony,’ I’m quoting him. He said, ‘Tony, I’m going to rape your wife, I’m going to rape all of your grandchildren,’ and he said ‘the next time you go out of town, I’m going to kill them, and what the F are you going to do about it?’ End quote.”

Spell did not wait. He crossed the highway toward the young man, who was standing in his own front yard. Cellphone and surveillance video captured the confrontation. As Spell charged across the road, footage appears to show the neighbor threw the first punch. A fierce physical fight erupted on the grassy shoulder beside passing traffic. The young man later required stitches after the clash.

James Talarico claims to be 'Christian who hates Christianity' in resurfaced interview 'This guy is just so weird' By Jon Brown, Christian Post Reporter Wednesday, June 24, 2026
<https://www.christianpost.com/news/james-talarico-claims-to-be-christian-who-hates-christianity.html>

U.S. Senate candidate and Democratic Texas state Rep. James Talarico claimed he "hates Christianity" in a recently resurfaced interview from 2021 with a transgender-identifying theologian. "I always think of myself as a Christian who hates Christianity, right?" Talarico said during a March 2021 episode of the "Activist Theology Podcast," which was first reported earlier this week by The Federalist and went viral on X when the Republican National Committee posted a clip.

Talarico, who is running against Republican Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton in the state's U.S. Senate election this November, went on to frame Jesus Christ in Marxist terminology during his conversation with trans-identifying author Roberto (Robyn) Che Espinoza and the Rev. Anna Golladay, a minister in the United Methodist Church who is also running for Congress in Tennessee.

"I always get drawn back into it because nowhere else, in no other political philosophy and no other economic theory do I find anything nearly as truly radical or revolutionary as the teachings of that barefoot rabbi," Talarico said of Jesus, who he has repeatedly described as a "barefoot rabbi."

Talarico also said the teachings of Christ resemble "the teachings of the Buddha and other mystical traditions," echoing the universalist theology he has elsewhere espoused. Claiming he was influenced by a "Christian anarchist tradition," Talarico also described himself as a "boring, cis-white man" who "added Presbyterian to spice it up." Talarico, a lifelong member of the increasingly liberal Presbyterian Church (USA), has made his status as a seminarian a key part of his political persona, but has drawn intense scrutiny for his theological views since securing his U.S. Senate primary victory in March

According to an arrest affidavit obtained by KENS 5, an undercover agent began messaging the suspect on June 11 on the social media app Hush, posing as a 14-year-old girl. After initial conversations where Eastin told the agent he was a 37-year-old man from San Antonio, the affidavit says he began sending sexually explicit messages. When Eastin requested a meetup for the next day, the undercover agent asked for a photo of him. That's when Eastin sent a photo of himself in a vehicle with sunglasses and a baseball cap on, the court document said.

IN OBSCURA COMMENT This SUBJECT made one contact while in his security uniform with his badge visible on camera identifying it as "Cornerstone." Clergy and church security groups must be aware of alerting behavior of all employees. It is hard to conceive of a security officer having this hidden lifestyle. The fact that his badge had the church name Cornerstone led to his arrest; that he was in uniform eschews the behavioral state of this addiction. Background investigations are not always tenacious enough for such critical positions and constant evaluation of employees must be a focus for clergy and church security supervisory officers.

IN OBSCURA COMMENT

I've noticed the increase in child sexual crimes with a nexus to the church, the posting of each one would require a monthly report. The message is very clear, and churches are walking into severe and historic litigation for failing to provide a secure environment for its congregations. Clergy and church security leadership and officers must be acquainted with indicators presented by victims and behaviors, tells, of those committing these acts in or out of church. It is very, very common that they seek placement and access then a trusting relationship is built with the child and then the child is victimized.

LAKE JACKSON, Texas (KTRK) -- The Lake Jackson Police Department says a one-time church employee is currently in the Brazoria County Jail without bond for allegedly committing multiple sex acts against children. An official with the department says Adrian Gerard Johnson was employed at Destiny Church in Clute at the time of the incidents but wouldn't confirm whether or not they were directly connected to his position.

An indictment against Johnson indicates he's been charged with 18 counts related to alleged sexual acts with children. They include multiple accounts of aggravated sexual assault of a child, sexual performance by a child, sexual assault of a child, and trafficking of a person. The indictment shows Johnson has also been charged with single counts of compelling prostitution, indecency with a child by exposure, and bigamy.

The alleged acts, according to court records, took place from 2015 to 2020 and included three separate victims. Two of those victims were under 14 years old, according to the indictment.

TACOMA, Wash. — Pierce County prosecutors have charged a man with second-degree burglary after Tacoma police said he was found at a church daycare and later told officers he was ghost hunting. According to court documents, officers responded to a call about a burglary in progress after a man was seen on video inside the church daycare. Tacoma police said the daycare was surrounded by an 8-foot chain-link fence. When officers arrived, they found the man trying to climb the fence before officers ordered him to stop. Court documents say the man initially told police he was looking for higher education and believed the property was connected to the church. He also said he thought the location was abandoned and told officers he had jumped a fence to get onto the property, according to police. Police also said the man told officers he had smoked “Clear” before going onto the property.

Church security teams in urban environments should take note of the human domain present in their area. In this event, the SUBJECT admitted to being high on “Clear.” Encountering SUBJECTS in similar behavioral states state can be expected to be armed by edged weapons, combative and argumentative, or the exact opposite, docile and complaint. Muslim man arrested on hate crime charges for attacking Christian woman in Portland

A Muslim man has been arrested on felony hate crime charges for an alleged attack against a Christian woman in Portland, Oregon. Authorities said that Mahamat Noh, 32, physically shoved the woman up against a wall and placed his hands around her neck after becoming irate over her cross necklace. Noh was taken into custody on Friday, June 19. The incident occurred inside his apartment on the 11000 block of Southeast Powell Boulevard just before 5 am, police said.

The woman told police she was attacked by Noh when she was trying to leave. He reportedly began reciting verses from the Quran after taking issue with the victim's cross necklace. The woman told him, "God has my back." Noh responded, "F*ck your God" before allegedly grabbing the victim's arms, pushing her up against the wall, and placing his hands around her neck, according to court documents obtained by KATU.

At least one roommate witnessed the attack. He told police that he woke up and observed Noh hitting the woman. When interviewed by police and shown images of the victim's injuries, including bruising, Noh said the Christian woman was "burning from the inside," according to the outlet. Additionally, Noh told authorities that his roommate, who claimed to have observed the attack, was "brainwashed," and claimed that the woman had attacked Noh for reading the Quran.

Montréal gunman leaves behind manifesto inspired by the 'incel' movement

A shooting in the Canadian city on Monday, June 22, left three dead, including a police officer and the attacker. In a manifesto, the shooter expressed his hatred of women.

The shooter, who was killed by the police, left behind a manifesto of about 100 pages in which he expressed his hatred of women, following the ideology of the so-called "incel" \(involuntary celibate\) movement. This misogynist subculture brings together men who believe they have been rejected by women and hold them responsible for their misfortune and society's ills.

On Monday evening, residents of the neighborhood were still trying to process the shock. Charlotte Williams, 48, paced nervously along the tree-lined sidewalk at the edge of the police security perimeter, illuminated by flashing lights. "I'm walking to calm my fear. My neighborhood is usually quiet; now I have a huge knot in my stomach. I don't think I'll be able to sleep, even though the attacker has been neutralized,"

Illegal Alien Accused of Leading Alleged Plot Targeting White House Event

by: Greg Hoyt 2026-06-18 Source: Law Enforcement Today News

WASHINGTON, DC – Homeland Security issued a press release earlier in June alleging that an illegal immigrant who’d previously been granted a DACA status during the Obama administration was acting as a “ringleader” in the foiled terrorism plot targeting the UFC Freedom 250 event held at the White House.

According to local reporting out of Nebraska, 31-year-old Abraham Hermosillo Alvarez was arrested on June 14th during an executed raid carried out at a dilapidated church located in the town of Western due to his alleged connection to the terrorism plot aimed at the White House. Officials claim Alvarez served as a ringleader in the alleged plot targeting the UFC Freedom 250 event, with Special Agent in Charge Eugene Kowel of the FBI Omaha Field Office claiming Alvarez assisted with recruiting would-be extremists and outlining schematics for the failed plot.

From there he allegedly directed and recruited others across the country to conduct a horrific attack against government officials in a mass casualty event. The old church building that was subject to the FBI raid earlier in June was reportedly owned by Alvarez, with officials claiming he intended the building to be used as a “safe zone” for himself and those he allegedly recruited for the terrorism plot.

According to Homeland Security, Alvarez, who is facing federal charges of conspiracy to commit an offense against the U.S. and conspiracy to commit murder, is a Mexican citizen who was residing illegally in the country after overstaying on a B2 visitor visa. Alvarez's B2 visa reportedly expired back in 2001, with the Obama administration granting him DACA status back in 2014.

Homeland boss says Iran tried to sneak IRGC-tied operatives into U.S. with World Cup soccer team "These games that Iran plays makes them an adversary that you can't trust," Markwayne Mullin said. Mullin said more than half the soccer representatives Iran tried to bring with its team had ties to the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) and that even a man posting Saturday as their soccer federation president was tied to the extreme military group and then I've entered ahead of Sunday's match.

"The guy that tried to get on the plane yesterday had direct ties to the IRGC," the Homeland chief told Fox News' Maria Bartiromo. "We accepted 53 individuals coming in and the rest of the individuals that Iran had tried to bring in all also had direct ties to the IRGC and aren't their normal traveling group," he said.

Mullin said President Donald Trump expected Iran to sneak bad actors into the country and authorized Homeland to do extreme vetting.

Associated Press journalist saw soldiers searching people on the road to the airport in the aftermath of the violence.

Hours later, the National Civil Aviation Agency said the airport was operating normally. 🚩 URGENT WARNING FROM THE WHITE HOUSE: COMMUNISTS ARE COMING FOR YOUR GOD! 🚩

Texas Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick just dropped a thunderbolt in the Oval Office: “They remove God. They close the churches. ⚠️ Pastor Tony Spell was changing a church bus battery when his neighbor's son screamed threats to rape his wife, rape his grandchildren, and kill his family while he was away.

He had reported them to police. Nothing was done.
So he crossed the highway himself.

5 stitches for the neighbor. Handcuffs for the Pastor. Zero charges for the man who made the threats.

Every husband and father watching this knows exactly what was running through his mind. 🇺🇸

Left-wing media, angry over the convictions and sentencing of the North Texas Antifa terror cell members, claim the incident was a peaceful "protest" by activists engaging in First Amendment-protected activity.

But the jury saw the truth at trial.

Here is the body camera footage from the July 4, 2025, armed ambush attack in Alvarado, Texas by a Dallas-based Antifa cell. Read my reporting about the case and sentencing here:

Over 300 Antifa protestors showed up to our event in Seattle.

They threw urine filled balloons, were topless in front of children and even tried charging me onstage.

It was so chaotic that it reached the White House and the department of justice.

Why? All because we wanted to worship and pray.

Let me make it clear. We as Christians will NEVER back down.

We will not be silenced or intimidated, its revival time in America, again!
